My dear General:

Shortly after the outbreak of the Korean situation, General Gruenther, now with General Eisenhower, informed me that I was made available to the Central Intelligence Agency for duty and some correspondence with the Agency ensued. This morning I received a letter from General Boling, in answer to my inquiry, and in the letter he stated that he thought my services might be utilized by the Security Agency. I am presuming that he is referring to the Central Intelligence Agency. I hope that I am not imposing unduly by asking you if there is anything to the suggestions made by General Boling and my friend, Al Gruenther.

Via the grapevine I have heard that you have not been too well lately. The newspapers even carried items that you hoped to complete the reorganization of the Agency and then retire.

Have you ever given any thought to Colorado as an ideal spot for both hunting and fishing? I know that you are fond of both and, having lived in Colorado for two years, I know that the climate is very invigorating. Also, ranches can be bought very reasonably, chiefly in areas of good hunting and good fishing. You may have gotten a bit of the invigorating effect of the climate the short time you were there in 1949.

I hope that you have recovered completely and can enjoy fully your retirement. In my book you have earned it. Thank you for your kind consideration.

Dear :

Thank you for your letter of March 19, relative to my letter of March 16 to Mr. Jackson. I would be grateful if you would, as you suggest, have your personnel people get in touch with at Stanford University. Please give my regards to Mr. Jackson on his return.

Very truly yours,

EAS:hb
